The Principal's Role in the Instructional Process: Implications for School Leaders and Instructional Coaches

School improvement works when everybody learns every day. And because students learn in schools that learn, professional development must involve hands-on partnerships and specified learning approaches and strategies. It is not the number of initiatives we implement that really matter. The only meaningful difference between an initiative and student achievement is the degree of implementation. Finally, long term sustainability and implementation depends on creating opportunities for internal capacity of local teachers and leaders to implement and monitor best practices.

Steve Ventura and his colleagues at Advanced Collaborative Solutions are working towards a future in which every child - regardless of race or socioeconomic status - has access to highly effective teachers and leaders who have received exceptional professional development.

Join us for an engaging experience that will get the conversation started.
